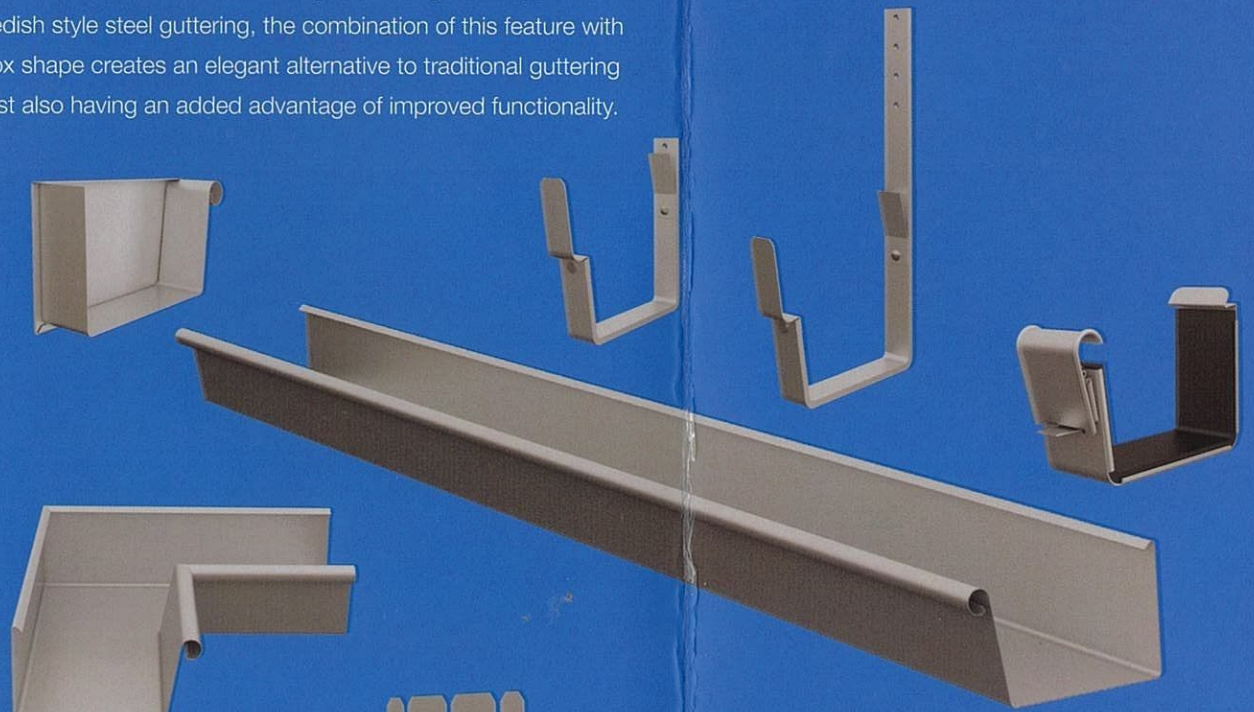
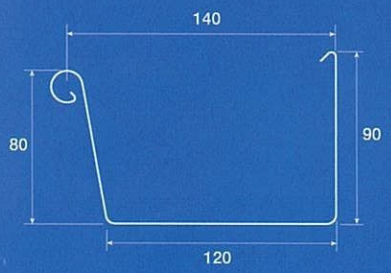
The contemporary aesthetic and simplified functionality that is characteristic of modern Swedish design

A round bead on the forward-facing lip of the gutter is typical of Swedish style steel guttering, the combination of this feature with a box shape creates an elegant alternative to traditional guttering whilst also having an added advantage of improved functionality.





Those familiar with Lindab Rainline guttering will know how the well-designed gutter joints simplify quick and secure installation. The new rectangular shape with front bead allows the same type of one-piece joint to work with a box profile. Trained professionals will also be able to use the bead design to install the system using craft jointing methods.
